TOMATO HORNWORMS IN HOME GARDENS

SUZANNE WOLD-BURKNESS AND JEFF HAHN, UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

Tomato Hornworms - Manduca quinquemaculata, are very large caterpillars that have a "horn-like" tail that gives them their name. Large numbers of caterpillars can occur in home gardens and can quickly defoliate plants. Tomato hornworms feed only on solanaceous plants, i.e. the nightshade family, especially tomato. There are many solanaceous weeds that also serve as alternate hosts, including horsenettle, jimsonweed and nightshade.

Hello,

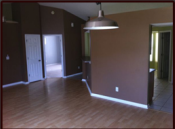

My name is Chris Reisdorff, I am the owner of CPR painting. I have made painting my career since 1995. At the beginning of my trade, I was living in the desert of Tucson Arizona. There I would begin my training and experience in what would be my long time livelihood. I have experience in all phases of painting. Exterior, Interiors, Residential and Commercial. I have painted multi-million dollar homes in the Arizona desert to the beautiful custom homes located on the Florida coast line, St Johns river and the modest homes of Florida's peaceful suburbs.

I take pride in the quality of my work. I believe in doing the best job every time. My prices are fair and competitive and estimates are always free. I use only the finest paint products, keeping your home or business looking its best for years to come. I conduct myself in a professional manner by being on time every time, and always on the job site.

I am available at any time for you to discuss any concerns or add-ons you may want to make. My wife Dawn is also a big part of my company and the success of it. She is devoted to go out of her way to help with any of the decision making you may need advice on, she specializes in color matching and mixing. Advertisement and marketing
