STEP BACK TO LOOK FORWARD

At least 95% of injuries at work have an element of unsafe behaviour – the things we should do but don't, or don't do when we should.

Even if you had the best systems and procedures in the world, and the most immaculate and tidy workplace, injuries will still occur if people break the rules, defeat guards, take short cuts, don't wear their PPE and so on.

Why Do People Behave Unsafely?

There are many, many reasons...

- Sometimes people don't have the tools and equipment to do the job safely.
- Sometimes they do have the tools and equipment, but don't use them.
- Sometimes the rules and procedures haven't been put in place.
- Sometimes they have, but people don't follow them.
- Sometimes they feel under pressure for production and safety gets compromised.
- Sometimes people take shortcuts because it's easier, simpler, saves time.
- Sometimes we see people behaving unsafely, but we don't say anything or do anything.
- Sometimes they're just not thinking. Or they're tired, stressed, distracted, unwell or preoccupied. (We're only human after all!)

So, What Do We Do?

There are only 2 types of unsafe behaviour

- Those we don't recognise as unsafe
- Those we ignore

We need to be clear on the safe behaviours we expect of people so it is clear what's acceptable and what's not. And we need to enforce it.

Secondly, we need to have a workplace where we never ever ignore an unsafe act.

Whenever we see somebody doing something where they're at risk, we say something, or do something

We need to work together in order to improve the culture in the workplace

ARE YOU TRAINED TO DO YOUR JOB?

Depending on your job role, you will be provided with sufficient training which will assist you in carrying out your general duties.

Training equips you with the knowledge and confidence to deliver a safe, good quality service efficiently.

Never put yourself or colleagues in danger by undertaking a task without having appropriate training.

A trained and competent team is a safer, more confident and more effective team!
