Christopher & Dana Reeve

Christopher Reeve accepts our invitation

Christopher Reeve, in his first visit to Australia, will be the guest speaker at a dinner at Fox Studios on Tuesday 28 January 2003. The dinner will raise funds to support research into spinal cord injury at the Institute's Spinal Injuries Research Centre.

Still Flying High - a Dinner with Christopher Reeve will be an unforgettable experience with celebrity guests, all-star entertainment and a touch of the silver screen.

Christopher Reeve, accompanied by his wife Dana, will visit the Institute prior to attending the dinner to enable him to see, at first hand, the work of the scientists. Dr James Brook, a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute, receives a grant from the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation in the US, strengthening the link with the Reeve family.

"Through my visit to Australia, I seek to publicly acknowledge the dedication of the scientists at the Prince of Wales Medical Research Institute," said Mr Reeve, "and to encourage the community to financially support their commitment to not only finding a cure for spinal cord injury, but to helping those like me who are living with paralysis, to regain independence and to enjoy a fulfilling life."

Mr Reeve was urged to visit Australia by Gaihi Cusack, a personal friend of Institute Board Member, David Thomas. A friend of the Reeve family for the past 11 years, Ms Cusack visited the Institute and, after meeting scientists working on spinal injury research, returned to the Reeve's home in the US and undertook the role of advocate for the Institute.

Premier of New South Wales, The Honourable Bob Carr announced the visit at a press

"In less time that it will take you to read these words,
my life changed forever."

Christopher Reeve

conference held at the Institute. Mr Reeve will also speak at "Making Connections" the NSW Premier's Forum on Spinal Cord Injury and Conditions being held at the Darling Harbour Convention Centre on 27 and 28 January 2003.

In 1999, the Institute established The Spinal Injuries Research Centre with the aim of improving the daily lives of spinal injured patients, and to assist in searching for a cure, through exhaustive research.

Spinal injury is a devastating condition, usually resulting in paralysis, loss of sensation, and disruption of body functions. Many spinal patients are in constant pain.

Each year, some 300 Australians suffer spinal injuries resulting in paraplegia and tetraplegia, with New South Wales experiencing the highest toll. The majority of those affected are young adults in the 15 to 35 year age group with fifty percent of these traumatic injuries resulting from motor vehicle accidents.

The annual cost of care for a patient with a spinal cord injury ranges from $600,000 for a paraplegic to $4million per year for a ventilator dependent tetraplegic. The total cost to Australia is estimated to be up to $1billion per year.

There is currently no cure for spinal cord injury.

Tickets to the dinner are $275 per person, with 'premium' packages available - all funds raised will go directly to spinal cord research. To receive an invitation please email details to Lmclaughlin@unsw.edu.au or call Lara McLaughlin at the Institute on (02) 9382 2937.
