Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae

Based in Paris, Marguerite Sauvage has worked since 2001 as an illustrator, art director and animator creating chic modern illustrations that capture the lifestyle of today's trendsetters. Marguerite grew up in the French countryside near the small town of Coulommiers, east of Paris. She drew throughout her childhood and teenage years. A self-taught illustrator, she originally studied law and communications, and did not decide that illustration was her best means of self-expression until she graduated from University in 2001. She quickly seduced titles such as Elle or Glamour and rapidly exported her work overseas in various field in press and publishing. With illustration that is stylish yet accessible, she has been in demand with prominent advertising and corporate clients including PlayStation, Apple, Marshall Fields, Motorola or Orange. Her work has been published and exposed in a number of books on various topics relating to art and design. She also exhibited her illustrations in galleries from Japan to US. Everyday life is probably her biggest source of inspiration. „Happiness and anti-stress: I just want to make things prettier, make people consider my images as eyecandies.“ Very enthusiast to experiment her talent on various media, Marguerite's animation work has touched on both series and character design as well as commercial animation applications such as short films, web and commercials. She has just finished a series pilot called Monsieur Loutre (Mister Otter) an entertaining and educational program for 5 - 10 year olds with a humorous otter as the main character.
